General description	Communication theory puts the intellectual foundations from which will have to be considered the theory of the information. It analyses the factors that take part in the phenomenon of the communication, especially in the public communication. It enters in the study of the social phenomenon of the collective communication. It shows the context partner-political in which they exert the informative professions. It studies the paper of the means in the society and in the current political system, taking into account *emisores, contents and audiences. It treats of the importance that today have the processes of communication, the work mediator that realise the media when giving to know the reality to the citizens, the capacity of influence that has the communicative system when penetrating in the social system. The history of the communication studies the communication understood like result of the action of the media in a space and concrete times. With a diachronic approach. It stands out the social transcendence of the communication. In this part of the matter interest the processes and communicative facts that constitute a fundamental factor in the articulation of the social groups along the history
