Other comments on the Evaluation

For all the students:

Continuous assessment can only be applied if the student has attended at least at 80% of the scheduled seminars AND delivered the 100% of works proposed for those seminars regardless his/her attendance.

Students who opt out of continuous assessment or who do not meet the mentioned above criteria will be assessed by means of specific examinations, which shall include theory and applied work. The specific information will be available in the document labelled as "Subject Rules" FAITIC website (Uvigo learning website)

The grading required to apply the weighing scheme entails a minimum passing grade of 5 out of 10 in each part (theory and applied work). In any other case the mark will be fail.

Specifically for those students who chose to attend the English course of this subject:

Students must explicitly opt in by sending an email to the professor/s who teach/es this subject in English language. By sending this email the student CHOOSES to be assessed in English language, which means s/he can only attend the English classes of this subject and can only sit for examination in English. During the same course, it is not allowed to shift from one to another once the student submits his/her decision on the language. By sending that email, the student explicitly desists from being assessed and sitting for examination in any other language during the current course.

Information on the exact assessment percentages will be posted in the FAITIC website (Uvigo learning website) at the beginning of the course. English students who do not strictly meet the criteria of continuous assessment as mentioned above will be graded by specific summative examinations, which will include theory and applied work parts.

ALL the students are to deliver the 100% of works proposed for seminars regardless the type of assessment (continuous or summative examinations).

Other comments

This syllabus should be interpreted as the foreseeable working lines that will be developed in this subject during the semester. It is conceived to be flexible due to the lack of information on the composition of the students group in advance. Accordingly, it may require readjustments along the semester essentially due to the group dynamics and to prevent potential situations that may hinder the teaching-learning process. Further, the lecturers shall provide the required information to students depending upon that dynamics and stage in the teaching-learning process
