Other comments on the Evaluation

Ordinary examination: In this subject there will be a continuous evaluation of the work done by the student. To pass the course by continuous evaluation two conditions must be fulfilled: 1. To reach at least 25% of the mark in the three tests carried out (test, test IRPF, IS and IVA). 2. To obtain at least 5 points in the sum of the two evaluation methodologies proposed (test and test IRPF, IS and IVA). Failure to take any of the two written tests will mean that the student is no longer evaluated in continuous assessment. The student will also stop being evaluated if he does not reach at least 25% of the mark in the three tests carried out (test, test IRPF, IS and IVA). The final mark for continuous assessment will be the sum of the partial marks obtained up to that moment. Those students who have not passed the subject by continuous assessment will have the option of taking a final exam. This exam will be worth 100% of the grade, and the grade obtained will replace the one obtained in continuous assessment. In the event of not taking the exam, the grade will be the one obtained in continuous assessment. Extraordinary call: The extraordinary call will consist of a final exam. This exam will be worth 100% of the grade. The dates and times of the assessment tests in the different calls are those specified in the assessment test calendar approved by the Xunta for the 2020-2021 academic year. In the case of conflict or disparity between the dates of the exams, those indicated on the FCETOU website will prevail.
